PHIL 122 section 01, Social Justice
Introduction to Postcolonial Theory
Mondays 1500-1745, In Person
Spring 2027

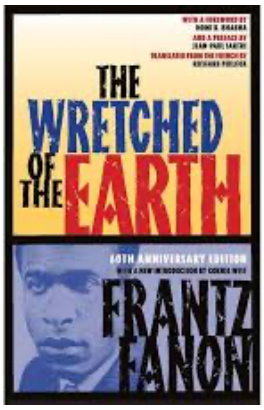

Raymond "Estrella" Noriega (any/all)
raymond.noriega@sjsu.edu

Wangechi Mutu, Noble Savage 2006 (left) and Lizard Love 2006 (right)

What are colonization and colonialism? When and where does it happen? What are its effects on people and their descendants? What does it mean to decolonize? How does coloniality interact with race, gender/sex, disability, and class?

This course is designed to introduce you to some essentials in postcolonial theory, including the following authors: Aníbal Quijano, Walter Mignolo, Patrick Wolfe, Franz Fanon, Edward Said, Jasbir Puar and Amit Rai, Maria Lugones, Helen Meekosha, Jodi A. Byrd, and Eve Tuck and K. Wayne Yang. We may also touch on: Roxanne Dunbar-Ortiz, Nick Estes, Kyle Whyte, and Aimé Césaire. Except for Fanon's The Wretched of the Earth, all required readings will be on Canvas.

In the tradition of scholar-activism, all theory we entertain as philosophers will be connected to our real world and our part in it. We might also engage with a film, art, or a field trip